There are a thousand different reasons to go over why not to boycott BP (British Petroleum). One is that they are the number one driving finical force in the gulf right now. Go about our business as normal and wait to see how they handle themselves towards the people who are most financially bonded to this very unstable situation for not only the south, or America , but the whole world. We will all have to bond together and pray on this one. Get involved. If we find out that they are scamming the families with deceptive practices that's another thing.

One the gas stations that carry BP's traditional and non-traditional trademarks are usually owned by local businessmen in your neighborhood that signed a contract for god knows how many years to sell that particular companies gasoline.

When you boycott a local gas station. Your boycotting your own neighborhood. The owner is feeling the effect of your boycott and he's somebodies friend , dad , neighbor in America feeling yet another finical impact from this disaster.

Before you start burning things down remember a man never lights a fire under his own feet.

Someone blew it up cause they knew they could profit from the clean up. Investigate who's cleaning it up.

BP is Paying all the families suffering from the spill. If they run out of money. So do those families. Support bp. And the actions they are doing to fix this.

There is foul play.
